OVERVIEW

Human trafficking is a heinous crime, severe violation of human rights, and worldwide health issue. During National Slavery and Human Trafficking Prevention Month, this live webinar will focus on the unique role of the health care community to combat this scourge on the most vulnerable in societies. Learn from our distinguished panel of doctors championing these issues as they work to fight human trafficking in the medical field through victim identification, comprehensive health care, victim-centered and trauma-informed care, and beyond.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of the course, participants will be able to:

- Understand person-centered care for vulnerable persons and victims of human trafficking.
- Identify and assess victims of human trafficking, and understand the physical and psychological consequences of being trafficked.
- Integrate into their practice a diversity of specialized service skills, social resources, cultural competence and trauma-informed perspectives.
- Build rapport and trust with patients, meeting their needs and assisting them in creating safety and security in their lives.
- Form partnerships and collaborations with community organizations to help victims and vulnerable populations.
